

MORNING BRIEFING — 15 SEPTEMBER 2026

Generated pre-European open · London time (BST, UTC+1) · Data collected via web search during this session

2. IMPORTANT NEWS

US 10-year Treasury yield tops 5% intraday, highest since 2007 close

TheStreet / Trading Economics

Yield touched a 19-year intraday high of 5.01% Monday before easing to 4.96%. Raises the discount rate on risk assets just ahead of the Fed decision and reinforces the hawkish repricing driving global markets lower.

FOMC two-day meeting starts today; hike probability above 50% after Fed Chair Warsh remarks

FedRateCalc / Charles Schwab

Decision due Wednesday 16 Sept, 2:00pm ET (~7:00pm London). Markets had priced a hold near-certain a week ago; Warsh's comments pushed implied hike odds from ~36% to above 50%. Would be the Fed's first hike since 2023.

Oil extends sharp rally: Brent above $108, WTI above $102

Trading Economics

Brent up 3.56% to $108.34, WTI up 1.40% to $102.81 (collected at different points Mon/Tue). Adds an inflationary impulse that feeds directly into the Fed's hike calculus and has pushed German energy CPI to a post-April high.

AI/semiconductor-led selloff drags Wall Street lower Monday

CNBC / Yahoo Finance

Dow -152pts (-0.29%), S&P 500 -0.48%, Nasdaq -0.56% as growth/AI valuations came under pressure alongside rising yields. Sets a soft handoff into the Asian and European sessions.

US high-grade bond issuance market frozen since last week's tariff announcement

Yahoo Finance

No new US investment-grade bonds have priced since sweeping tariffs were imposed; some recent order books saw investors pull orders after final pricing came worse than guided — a funding-market stress signal to watch into the Fed decision.

3. EUROPEAN FUTURES (PRE-OPEN)

| CONTRACT              | LEVEL | EXPECTED MOVE                                                     |
|-----------------------|-------|-------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Euro Stoxx 50 futures | n/a   | Live Eurex pre-open quote not reliably sourced at collection time |
| DAX futures           | n/a   | n/a                                                               |
| CAC 40 futures        | n/a   | n/a                                                               |
| FTSE 100 futures      | n/a   | n/a                                                               |

US FUTURES (CONTEXT)

| CONTRACT           | MOVE             |
|--------------------|------------------|
| S&P 500 futures    | -0.17%           |
| Dow futures        | -161 pts (-0.3%) |
| Nasdaq 100 futures | -0.12%           |

Source: CNBC/Bloomberg pre-market updates, collected early Tuesday. Directional read for Europe: Asian markets traded broadly softer overnight tracking Monday's US selloff, so European futures are more likely tilted lower at the open, but no live exchange print could be confirmed — treat as directional context only, not a quote.

4. YESTERDAY'S CLOSES (MONDAY 14 SEPT)

| INDEX         | CLOSE     | CHANGE                                           |
|---------------|-----------|--------------------------------------------------|
| Euro Stoxx 50 | n/a       | Conflicting sources for this date — not reported |
| DAX 40        | 25,441    | -0.50% (-128 pts)                                |
| CAC 40        | 8,135     | -0.5%                                            |
| FTSE 100      | 10,697.57 | +0.4%                                            |

London bucked the regional trend, lifted by defensive names (healthcare, consumer staples) and oil majors as crude spiked; Frankfurt and Paris slipped on tech-linked weakness and rising yields into the Fed week. Source: Business Recorder, MarketScreener, Trading Economics.

5. US MARKETS — YESTERDAY'S SESSION (MONDAY 14 SEPT)

| INDEX                        | CLOSE     | CHANGE            |
|------------------------------|-----------|-------------------|
| S&P 500                      | 7,619.98  | -0.48%            |
| Dow Jones Industrial Average | 52,421.20 | -0.29% (-152 pts) |
| Nasdaq Composite             | 26,186.41 | -0.56%            |

Tone: Risk-off. Risk appetite weakened under the combined weight of an AI/semiconductor selloff, elevated crude prices and a sharp rise in Treasury yields ahead of Wednesday's Fed decision.

Leading/lagging sectors: n/a — sector-level breakdown for this specific session not reliably sourced. Semiconductor and AI-linked names were the reported drag.

Key takeaway: Markets are trading defensively into a binary Fed outcome (hold vs. first hike since 2023), with rates and oil both working against risk assets simultaneously.

6. ASIAN MARKETS — OVERNIGHT SESSION (TUESDAY 15 SEPT)

| INDEX                        | LEVEL   | CHANGE         |
|------------------------------|---------|----------------|
| Nikkei 225                   | ~63,493 | Flat           |
| Topix                        | n/a     | -0.74%         |
| Hang Seng                    | n/a     | -0.2%          |
| Shanghai Composite / CSI 300 | n/a     | Little changed |
| Kospi                        | n/a     | -0.74%         |
| Kosdaq                       | n/a     | +1.07%         |
| ASX 200                      | n/a     | -0.8%          |

Overall tone soft, tracking the US selloff. Concerns about the pace of AI development (Anthropic CEO Dario Amodei's comments on slowing development cited as a factor) added to pressure from elevated oil prices and global bond yields, with both the Fed and a possible Bank of Japan move this week in view. ## 7. COMMODITIES

| COMMODITY             | LEVEL      | CHANGE                         |
|-----------------------|------------|--------------------------------|
| Brent crude           | $108.34   | +3.56%                         |
| WTI crude             | $102.81   | +1.40%                         |
| Gold (XAU/USD)        | $4,284.55 | n/a (day change not confirmed) |
| Natural gas (futures) | $2.876    | -0.007                         |
| Copper                | $6.31/lb  | -0.12%                         |

Surging oil and fuel prices have revived inflation and recession fears — Brent and WTI both above $100, with US diesel reported at a record ~$6/gallon. Gold sits well below its January 2026 all-time high (~$5,602) as rising real yields and hike expectations weigh on the metal. Copper fell 2.86% the prior session before stabilising. ## 8. RATES & FX

| INSTRUMENT            | LEVEL    | CHANGE                                  |
|-----------------------|----------|-----------------------------------------|
| US 10Y Treasury yield | 4.96%    | Eased from 19-yr intraday high of 5.01% |
| German 10Y Bund yield | n/a      | Not reliably sourced today              |
| EUR/USD               | ~1.1500s | Drifting lower, dollar firm             |
| GBP/USD               | ~1.3510  | Holding up on BoE hike bets             |
| DXY (Dollar Index)    | ~99.40   | Firm, above 99.00                       |

The dollar bid is coming directly from the Fed: markets have moved to price a near-certain rate move at this week's meeting, keeping the greenback supported broadly. Sterling is outperforming on more aggressive Bank of England hike expectations. Source: FXStreet.

| Avg euro corporate IG spread | n/a                                           | n/a                                                                 |

COMMENTARY

The primary window looks largely shut. Reporting indicates no new US investment-grade bonds have priced since sweeping tariffs were announced last week, with some recent order books seeing investors withdraw after final pricing came worse than initial guidance — the first disruption of this kind since the pandemic.

In Europe, new-issue premiums (NIPs) on euro IG corporate paper have been reported climbing as order books thin, consistent with a more cautious, higher-cost funding backdrop into the Fed decision. Positioning data also shows a capital rotation away from European credit (iTraxx Main) toward US IG (CDX IG) over the past few weeks.

Net read: funding conditions are tightening and issuer/investor caution is rising ahead of Wednesday's FOMC outcome; expect a quiet primary calendar until the rate decision clears. Sources: Yahoo Finance, GlobalCapital, Macrostream.

10. ECONOMIC CALENDAR (TODAY, LONDON TIME)

| TIME    | INDICATOR                                                        | CONSENSUS | IMPORTANCE |
|---------|------------------------------------------------------------------|-----------|------------|
| All day | FOMC meeting begins (2-day, decision due tomorrow ~19:00 London) | n/a       | HIGH       |
| n/a     | Other Eurozone/UK/US releases                                    | n/a       | N/A        |

Aggregator data pointed to roughly 60 scheduled economic events today, but individual release times/consensus figures for the Eurozone, UK and US could not be reliably confirmed in this session. UK CPI is confirmed for tomorrow, 16 September. Recommend checking a live calendar (Trading Economics/Investing.com) directly before the open.

11. CORPORATE EVENTS & EARNINGS

n/a — no specific earnings, AGMs or corporate events for today could be reliably sourced in this session.

12. STOCKS TO WATCH

|                                                             |                                                                                                                                                                                                            |             |
|-------------------------------------------------------------|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-------------|
| Defense &amp; Aerospace (sector)                     | Structural tailwind: FY2027 NDAA proposes raising annual US military spending to $1.15tn; GE Aerospace, RTX, TransDigm, Honeywell Aerospace cited as key beneficiaries. Thematic, not a same-day trigger. | Watch       |
| Energy majors (Europe)                               | Oil majors supported Monday's FTSE 100 gain as Brent/WTI extended their rally; likely to stay in focus while crude holds above $100.                                                                      | Higher bias |
| AI/semiconductor names (US-led, spillover to Europe) | Carried Monday's Wall Street selloff; European tech-adjacent names may see continued pressure at the open.                                                                                                 | Lower bias  |

n/a for the remainder — specific company-level movers (aviation, shipping, metals & mining, banks) with today-dated triggers could not be reliably sourced this session.

13. MACRO / CORPORATE / POLITICAL HIGHLIGHTS

MACRO

US 10Y yield touched 5.01% intraday Monday, highest since 2007 close, before easing to 4.96%.

FOMC decision Wednesday; hike odds above 50% after Fed Chair Warsh's remarks, up from ~36%.

Germany CPI +2.9% y/y in August, highest since April, driven by energy inflation (+10.5%) from the oil spike.

UK CPI holding at 2.9% (July reading); next print due tomorrow.

CORPORATE

US high-grade bond issuance market "teeters" — no new IG bonds priced since tariffs took effect last week.

Euro IG corporate new-issue premiums reported climbing as order books thin.

Stoxx 600 up ~11% YTD; DAX, CAC 40 and FTSE MIB have all hit record highs earlier this year on ~14-15% EPS growth (background context, not day-specific).

POLITICAL / GEOPOLITICAL

New US tariffs imposed last week continue to disrupt corporate funding markets and add to inflation risk.

Renewed Middle East tensions cited as a driver of the oil spike and higher German energy inflation.

Possible Bank of Japan policy move this week adds another central-bank risk event alongside the Fed.

14. KEY THEMES — TOP 5 BY HORIZON

TODAY'S TOP 5

FOMC meeting begins

Sets tone into Wednesday; hike odds above 50% for the first time since 2023.

10Y yield near 19-year highs

Pressures equity valuations, especially growth/AI names.

Oil at multi-month highs

Brent >$108, WTI >$102 — feeds directly into hike odds.

AI/semiconductor selloff momentum

Carries from Wall Street into Asia and Europe's open.

DCM primary window shut

No new US IG pricing since tariffs — a funding-stress signal.

THIS WEEK'S TOP 5

Fed rate decision + dot plot (Wed)

First possible hike since 2023; resets the policy path.

UK CPI (tomorrow)

Feeds Bank of England rate-path expectations.

Possible Bank of Japan move

A second major central-bank risk event this week; exact date n/a.

Tariff fallout on bond issuance

Watch whether IG primary re-opens once the Fed clears.

Late earnings reactions

n/a — specific names not confirmed this session.

THIS MONTH'S TOP 5

Fed's post-decision policy path

Hike vs. hold sets the tone for Q4 risk appetite.

Structural rise in long-end yields

10Y near 5% pressures both equity valuations and credit spreads.

Oil above $100 — stagflation narrative

Sustained energy inflation complicates the Fed's task.

Scope/duration of new US tariffs

Direct read-through to corporate funding market access.

European equities' record-high run tested

Stoxx 600's 2026 rally faces a higher-for-longer rate backdrop.

15. KEY TRENDS TO WATCH

1 DAY

European open reaction to Wall Street's AI-led selloff and a broadly soft Asian overnight session.

Pre-FOMC positioning; any further move in oil and the 10Y yield feeding risk appetite.

1 WEEK

FOMC decision Wednesday (hike vs. hold) and the accompanying dot plot.

UK CPI Wednesday; possible Bank of Japan signal.

Whether the DCM primary market re-opens once the Fed outcome and tariff dust settle.

1 MONTH

Whether a September hike (if delivered) marks the start of a renewed tightening cycle.

Persistence of oil/energy-driven inflation and its effect on both Fed and ECB/BoE policy paths.

Corporate bond market normalisation after the tariff-driven issuance freeze.

Whether European equities can sustain their 2026 record-high run against a higher-for-longer rate backdrop.
