

MORNING BRIEFING — THURSDAY 24 SEPTEMBER 2026

Generated 24 September 2026 • 06:50 BST (London) • Data collected 06:00–06:50 BST from Reuters, Bloomberg, CNBC, FT, TradingEconomics, GlobalCapital/IFR references • Reference timezone: Europe/London (BST = UTC+1)

2. IMPORTANT NEWS

US 10-year Treasury yield spikes to 5.10-5.11%, highest since July 2007

CNBC / Bloomberg • collected ~06:10 BST

The 10-year popped over 13bp intraday to 5.104%, a 19-year high; the 5-year touched 5% for the first time since 2007. Driven by hot flash PMI data, hawkish Fed rhetoric and a weak 5-year auction — the worst single-day Treasury sell-off in ~18 months. Why it matters: repricing of the entire discount-rate curve is hitting duration-sensitive equities and raises the cost of new bond issuance globally.

Fed rate-hike odds for October jump after blowout September PMIs

CNBC / Bloomberg • collected ~06:10 BST

Futures markets are pricing a high probability (estimates ranged 73-92% across sources) of the Fed's first hike since 2023 at the October meeting. Why it matters: a hawkish pivot after a long hiking pause would be a regime change for global rates, credit and FX, and is the single biggest driver of this week's volatility.

Oil holds near multi-month highs after Houthi strikes on Saudi energy sites, East-West pipeline shut

CNBC / UPI / Reuters • collected ~06:15 BST

Drone/missile strikes on Saudi Aramco facilities near the Yemen border injured dozens; Saudi Arabia shut the East-West crude pipeline as a precaution, and the IEA said Saudi crude supply fell to its lowest in three-plus decades. Crude briefly approached $100/bbl. Why it matters: adds an inflation and geopolitical risk premium that reinforces the hawkish Fed narrative.

Wall Street sells off as yields spike: S&P -0.8%, Nasdaq -1.1%, Russell 2000 sinks

TheStreet / Yahoo Finance / Motley Fool • collected ~06:20 BST

Energy was the only S&P sector to close higher; rate-sensitive utilities, REITs, communication services and consumer discretionary led losses. Why it matters: sets a risk-off tone into the European open, with growth and long-duration names most exposed to further yield moves.

GE Aerospace to acquire Consolidated Precision Products for $11.75bn

Company release / market wires • collected ~06:25 BST

Large aerospace supply-chain consolidation deal. Why it matters: signals continued M&A appetite in aerospace/defense despite the rates backdrop, and is a read-through for European suppliers (Safran, MTU, Rolls-Royce).

3. EUROPEAN FUTURES (PRE-OPEN)

CONTRACT	LEVEL	EXPECTED MOVE	COLLECTED
Euro Stoxx 50 futures	n/a	Lower, tracking Wall Street/Asia weakness	06:30 BST
DAX futures	n/a	Lower, in line with ES50	—
CAC 40 futures	n/a	Lower, in line with ES50	—
FTSE 100 futures	n/a	Lower, in line with peers	—
US context — overnight futures
S&P 500 e-mini	n/a	Soft, extending Wednesday's decline	06:30 BST
Nasdaq 100 e-mini	n/a	Soft, underperforming on rate sensitivity	06:30 BST

No reliably sourced exact pre-open futures levels were available at collection time; direction is inferred from confirmed reporting that Asian equities were set to open lower tracking Wall Street's rate-driven sell-off. Expect a cautious European open with downside bias until the flash PMIs land.

4. YESTERDAY'S CLOSES — EUROPEAN INDICES (23 SEPTEMBER 2026)

INDEX	CLOSE	CHANGE
Euro Stoxx 50	6,323	+0.08%
DAX 40	25,600	+0.10%
CAC 40	8,155	+0.20%
FTSE 100	10,708	−0.29%

European indices closed broadly flat-to-firmer on Wednesday, ahead of the US Treasury sell-off that hit later in the US session. FTSE 100 lagged, consistent with its higher exposure to rate-sensitive domestic names and energy-cost concerns.

5. US MARKETS — YESTERDAY'S SESSION (23 SEPTEMBER 2026)

INDEX	CLOSE	CHANGE
S&P 500	7,706.03	−0.8%
Dow Jones Industrial Average	51,511.59	−0.7% (−352.10 pts)
Nasdaq Composite	n/a	−1.1%

Tone: risk-off, rate-driven. The 10-year Treasury yield spiking to 5.11% (highest since 2007) triggered broad de-rating of long-duration equities; Nasdaq and Russell 2000 underperformed, ending back-to-back record highs for the Nasdaq.

Leading sector: Energy — the only S&P 500 sector to close higher, tracking the oil rally. Lagging sectors: Utilities and REITs (most exposed to higher discount rates), plus communication services and consumer discretionary.

Key takeaway: the bond market, not equity fundamentals, drove Wednesday's price action. Watch whether the yield spike stabilises or extends before the European open.

6. ASIAN MARKETS — OVERNIGHT SESSION

INDEX	LEVEL	CHANGE
Nikkei 225	n/a	Conflicting reports on session status; not reliably sourced
Hang Seng	n/a	−1%
Shanghai Composite	n/a	−0.4%
Kospi	n/a	+0.5%

Tone: mixed-to-lower, tracking Wall Street's rate-driven sell-off and firmer oil, which is stoking regional inflation concerns. Hong Kong and mainland China underperformed; Korea bucked the trend, helped by tech/semiconductor demand momentum (AMD/Nebius pricing read-through). Exact index levels could not be confirmed for today's session — only percentage moves were reliably sourced.

7. COMMODITIES

COMMODITY	LEVEL	CHANGE
Brent crude	n/a	n/a — directionally firm, see WTI
WTI crude	$92.71/bbl (23 Sep close)	+2.42%
Gold	~$4,290/oz (23 Sep, ~13:55 ET)	n/a intraday %
Natural gas (Henry Hub)	$3.02/MMBtu (23 Sep)	+1.90%
Copper	$6.74/lb (23 Sep)	-0.23%

Crude extended its rally on the Saudi energy-site attacks and East-West pipeline shutdown, with the IEA flagging the lowest Saudi crude supply in three-plus decades. Gold remains near record territory (2026 ATH: $5,589.38/oz, 28 Jan) even as real yields rise, reflecting safe-haven demand tied to Middle East risk. Natural gas firmed on lower US output; copper eased slightly but remains up over 40% year-on-year on AI/data-centre and grid demand.

8. RATES & FX

INSTRUMENT	LEVEL	CHANGE
US 10Y Treasury yield	5.10-5.11%	19-year high, +13bp intraday move (23 Sep)
German 10Y Bund yield	n/a — not reliably sourced today	n/a
EUR/USD	1.1379	-0.02%, near 2-month low
GBP/USD	~1.3228 (23 Sep)	-0.88%, lowest since late June
DXY (Dollar Index)	100.745 (23 Sep close)	+0.14%

The dollar is broadly stronger on the hawkish Fed repricing and stronger-than-expected US PMI data; sterling additionally weakened on UK public-deficit concerns. German Bund yield could not be confirmed from a reliable source at collection time and is marked n/a per data policy — expect it to be a key data point to watch as European trading opens given the US Treasury move.

9. DCM — PRIMARY BOND MARKET

COMMENTARY

Live spread levels and confirmed same-day pricing could not be cross-referenced from sourced reporting this morning; per the data policy, figures are marked n/a rather than estimated. Directionally, Barclays' September-roll estimates point to modest widening across iTraxx Main, Crossover and CDX IG. Context matters: the US 10-year Treasury yield's move to a 19-year high is exactly the kind of rate-volatility shock that typically widens new-issue concessions and can temporarily narrow the primary window, even in a market that has been running at a record pace for 2026 EUR IG issuance. Expect issuers to watch today's flash PMIs and the German Ifo print before committing to new deals; financials and SSA supply is more likely to test the market than long-duration industrials while rate volatility is elevated.

10. ECONOMIC CALENDAR — TODAY

TIME (LONDON)	INDICATOR	CONSENSUS	IMPORTANCE
n/a (AM)	Germany flash Manufacturing/Services PMI (Sep)	n/a	HIGH

n/a	German Ifo Business Climate (Sep)	n/a	MEDIUM
PM	US flash Manufacturing/Services PMI (Sep)	n/a	HIGH

Exact London release times and consensus figures could not be reliably sourced and cross-referenced for every item; times marked n/a should be checked against a live calendar (Reuters/Investing.com) before trading. This is described in sourced reporting as an unusually event-heavy day for data.

13. MACRO / CORPORATE / POLITICAL HIGHLIGHTS

MACRO

Fed rate-hike odds for October firmed sharply (estimates 73–92%) after blowout September flash PMI data — would be the first hike since 2023.

US 10-year Treasury yield hit 5.10–5.11%, a 19-year high; 5-year touched 5% for the first time since 2007, in the worst single-day Treasury sell-off in ~18 months.

A weak 5-year Treasury auction added to upward yield pressure, alongside rising corporate and government debt issuance.

CORPORATE

GE Aerospace to acquire Consolidated Precision Products for $11.75bn, a major aerospace supply-chain consolidation.

Lockheed Martin upgraded to Buy at UBS (target $674) on missiles/munitions and F-35 sustainment growth.

AMD +8% last week on Nebius pricing commentary for AMD/Intel chips; Ciena +6% premarket on an Evercore ISI upgrade.

POLITICAL / GEOPOLITICAL

Houthi strikes on Saudi Aramco energy facilities near the Yemen border; Saudi Arabia shut the East-West crude pipeline, cutting crude supply to a 30+ year low per the IEA.

Iran's president addressed the UN; Trump also spoke at the UN with renewed threats toward Iran, keeping a geopolitical risk premium in oil.

A Trump-Xi diplomatic engagement is reportedly on investors' radar as a trade-policy signal risk.
