

MORNING BRIEFING — THURSDAY 30 JULY 2026

Generated 07:00 BST (London) • Data collected between approx. 21:00 BST 29 July and 07:00 BST 30 July 2026 • Reference timezone: Europe/London (BST = UTC+1)

2. IMPORTANT NEWS

Fed holds rates at 3.50–3.75% in rare 9-3 vote, three regional presidents dissent in favour of a hike

CNBC / CNN • decision ~19:00 ET Wed 29 Jul (~00:00 BST 30 Jul)

Cleveland's Hammack, Minneapolis's Kashkari and Dallas's Logan all wanted a 25bp hike — the first three-way hawkish dissent since September 2016, under new Chair Kevin Warsh who gave no explicit forward guidance. Markets read this as the Fed "behind the curve" on inflation. 10Y Treasury yield rose roughly 7bp toward 4.63–4.67%; the 30Y hit 5.23%, its highest since 2007.

US-Iran military escalation reignites Middle East war; Brent spikes toward $90, WTI toward $84

CNBC / Bloomberg • overnight Wed-Thu

Reported strikes on Iranian targets and continued disruption of the Strait of Hormuz (day 151 of the crisis, only ~10 ships/day transiting vs a normal ~88) pushed Brent up nearly 8% intraday Wednesday and WTI +6.6% to settle $84.46. A fragile 10-day ceasefire proposal is reportedly on the table. Highly inflationary shock that complicates every G7 central bank's path, including today's Bank of England decision.

Wall Street's worst session since April 2025: Dow -2.19%, S&P 500 -1.52%, Nasdaq -1.74%

Washington Post / CNBC / TheStreet • close 21:00 BST Wed 29 Jul

Dow fell 1,153 points to 51,594.14. The combination of a hawkish Fed hold and the fresh oil shock drove the sell-off; Nasdaq is now described as more than 10% off its all-time high. Sets a weak, risk-off baseline heading into the European open.

Meta sinks ~9.6% after hours on an EPS miss despite a revenue beat; Microsoft rises ~2.4% on Azure strength

CNBC / Bloomberg / Investing.com • after-hours Wed 29 Jul ET

Meta EPS $6.18 vs $7.17 expected, even as revenue beat at $60.8bn. Microsoft's Azure grew 43% constant-currency with supportive FY27 capex guidance. The divergence crystallises investor unease over AI-spending sustainability — a theme likely to weigh on European AI-capex-linked names (ASML, SAP) at today's open, ahead of Apple and Amazon reporting after tonight's US close.

South Korea's Kospi crashes on Samsung/SK Hynix disappointment; two-day cumulative decline near 16%

Bloomberg / AP wire (via BNN Bloomberg) • Asian close, ~07:00 BST 30 Jul

Kospi fell 5.98% Wednesday to 5,663.24, roughly 40% below its June high, with circuit breakers triggered for a second consecutive session on AI-infrastructure spending doubts following Samsung and SK Hynix earnings. Thursday's session showed a volatile attempted stabilisation. Reinforces the AI-valuation anxiety theme feeding into Europe's open.

3. EUROPEAN FUTURES (PRE-OPEN)

CONTRACT	LEVEL	INDICATIVE MOVE	COLLECTION TIME
Euro Stoxx 50 (FESX)	n/a	Undated/unreliable sources — not confirmed for today	—
DAX (FDAX)	~25,528	-8 pts, essentially flat	pre-market, ~06:00 BST
CAC 40 (FCE)	n/a	No reliable same-day pre-open figure found	—
FTSE 100 (Z)	n/a	Figure surfaced but not confirmed as dated to today	—
US context — overnight/early premarket futures
Dow e-mini	n/a	+0.14%	early US premarket
S&P 500 e-mini	n/a	+0.35%	early US premarket
Nasdaq 100 e-mini	n/a	+0.78%	early US premarket

Crosscurrents into the open: Microsoft's beat and a modest US futures bounce argue for relief, but Meta's miss, the fresh Iran-driven oil spike and an unusually volatile Asian session argue for caution. Base case is a mixed, headline-driven European open rather than a clean directional move. Euro Stoxx 50/CAC 40/FTSE 100 futures levels could not be reliably confirmed via open web search this morning — treat as n/a pending a live data-terminal check immediately pre-open.

4. YESTERDAY'S CLOSSES — EUROPEAN INDICES (WED 29 JULY 2026)

INDEX	CLOSE	CHANGE
Euro Stoxx 50	n/a	Sources conflict (one showed -0.99%, another described flat/-0.5%) — not resolved
DAX 40	~25,520	+0.3%
CAC 40	n/a	+0.24% (level unconfirmed)
FTSE 100	10,908.41	+0.34% (+37.39 pts)

FTSE 100 set a fresh intraday record high of 10,951.06 before easing into the close. European trading was earnings-driven and dispersed ahead of the Fed decision: Kering +12% (Gucci sales beat), Sopra Steria +13% (raised guidance), Deutsche Bank +4.3% (profit beat), Porsche +1.2% (H1 profit +34%), LVMH +3.2% on the upside; ASML -2.5%, Hermès -2.8%, ASM International -5%, Aberdeen -5% (fund outflows) on the downside. The precise Euro Stoxx 50 print could not be resolved from conflicting sources.

5. US MARKETS — YESTERDAY'S SESSION (WED 29 JULY 2026)

INDEX	CLOSE	CHANGE	NOTE
S&P 500	7,316.15	-1.52%	—
Dow Jones Industrial	51,594.14	-2.19% (-1,153.18 pts)	WORST DAY SINCE APR 2025
Nasdaq Composite	24,442.94	-1.74%	>10% off all-time high

Risk-off tone driven by the hawkish-leaning Fed hold (three dissents favouring a hike) that pushed the 10-year Treasury yield up ~7bp above 4.6%, compounded by the fresh oil-price spike on Middle East escalation. Sector leaders: Health Care +2.4%, Consumer Staples +2.0%, Communication Services +1.9%. Laggards: Information Technology -1.8%, Energy -1.4% (despite the oil rally, likely a valuation/AI-capex read-through). Breadth was reportedly firmer than the cap-weighted indices suggest, with advancers beating decliners roughly 2.5:1 — defensive and smaller names held up even as mega-cap tech dragged the headline indices lower. Key takeaway: a hawkish Fed hold plus a fresh Mideast oil shock produced the worst Dow session in over a year, with AI-capex names bearing the brunt; Microsoft's post-close beat offers a partial offset into Thursday, while Meta's miss keeps AI-spending scepticism alive.

6. ASIAN MARKETS — OVERNIGHT SESSION

INDEX	LEVEL	CHANGE
Nikkei 225	61,434.19 (Wed close)	−1.49% Wed; Thu direction net negative-to-flat, precise level n/a (conflicting reads)
Hang Seng	25,807.92 (Wed close)	+1.96% Wed; Thu change n/a
Shanghai Composite	~3,828–3,830 (Wed close)	+0.40% Wed; Thu change n/a
Kospi	5,663.24 (Wed close)	−5.98% Wed (2-day cumulative ~−16%); Thu figure unreliable (range −1.1% to +4.4% across sources)

An unusually volatile, correlated risk-off/risk-on whipsaw driven by two simultaneous shocks: the US-Iran escalation (oil spike, Hormuz disruption) and a separate South Korean tech-stock crash tied to disappointing Samsung and SK Hynix earnings and AI-infrastructure-spend doubts, which triggered circuit breakers for two consecutive sessions. Kospi is roughly 40% below its June high. Thursday's session shows tentative bargain-hunting and stabilisation attempts in oversold chip names, but exact closing levels for Thursday are inconsistent across sources and are marked n/a rather than guessed; the qualitative read (volatile, attempting to stabilise after Wednesday's rout) is well corroborated.

7. COMMODITIES

COMMODITY	LEVEL	CHANGE	TIME
Brent (ICE, USD/bbl)	~89.50-90.00	Sharply higher, +~8% Wed session	overnight/early Thu
WTI (NYMEX, USD/bbl)	~84.00-84.50	+6.6% Wed, settled 84.46	overnight/early Thu
Gold (XAU/USD, USD/oz)	~4,080 (range 4,065-4,100)	+0.36%	early Thu
Natural gas — TTF (EUR/MWh)	~58.18	+0.65%	Wed 29 Jul
Natural gas — Henry Hub (USD/MMBtu)	n/a for today	Last confirmed ~2.80-2.90 (mid-July)	—
Copper (USD/lb)	~6.27-6.29	Roughly flat to -0.24% to -0.94%	28-29 Jul

Oil is the dominant story: the US-Iran escalation and Strait of Hormuz disruption have been described by some coverage as potentially the largest oil-supply disruption in the market's history this month, with Brent and WTI both up over 30% in July alone. Gold is rebounding toward $4,100 as the hawkish Fed hold and Middle East risk both support the safe-haven/anti-real-yield case. A sustained Brent move above $90 raises headline euro-area and UK inflation risk just as the BoE deliberates today.

8. RATES & FX

INSTRUMENT	LEVEL	CHANGE	TIME
US Treasury 10Y	~4.62–4.65%	+~7bp post-Fed	overnight
US Treasury 30Y	~5.23%	Highest since 2007	Wed 29 Jul
German Bund 10Y	~3.20%	Highest in >15 years	overnight
EUR/USD	~1.1465	Mild losses, early Asia session	~03:00–03:30 BST
GBP/USD	~1.3300s	–0.10%	~03:00–03:30 BST
DXY (Dollar Index)	~100.92	+0.12%	~03:00–03:30 BST

The dollar is firming as the Fed's hawkish hold combines with Iran-driven safe-haven demand, reversing a sharp fall the prior day. The Bund yield spike to a 15-year high reflects the ECB's hawkish July signalling (deposit rate held at 2.25% after a June hike) and energy-driven inflation concern, with officials flagging a likely September hike. The US 30Y at its highest since 2007 suggests markets see the Fed as behind the curve rather than preparing to ease.

9. DCM — PRIMARY BOND MARKET

YESTERDAY'S ISSUANCES (29 JULY 2026)

ISSUER	CURRENCY	SIZE	MATURITY	SPREAD (IPT)	NOTES
AT&T Inc.	EUR + GBP	≥€2.0bn (5-part)	4yr / 8yr / 12yr / 19yr EUR + 26yr GBP	~95bp (4yr EUR) to ~200bp (19yr EUR) over mid-swaps at IPT; final tightening n/a	First sterling tranche since 2018; reverse-Yankee trade exploiting lower European rates; books opened 27 Jul. Leads: Barclays, Citi, Goldman Sachs, Wells Fargo.
Other EUR corporate IG/ HY	n/a	n/a	n/a	n/a	Not confirmed for 29 Jul specifically — IFR/GlobalCapital primary tables are paywalled and not accessible via open search.
SSA / Financials EUR	n/a	n/a	n/a	n/a	No deal confirmed dated to 29 Jul. For context only: EU Commission's most recent syndication (early/mid-July) was a €11bn dual-tranche print (€6bn 5yr + €5bn tap of 20yr EU-Bond), part of an €80bn H2 2026 funding target.

PIPELINE / EXPECTED TODAY

No mandated or rumoured EUR corporate, FIG or SSA deal for 30 July could be confirmed via open search. Market commentary frames late July as a deliberately opportunistic, lower-traffic issuance window ahead of the usual September rush, favouring mid-sized (€500m–€3bn), less-frequent issuers able to get noticed without competing against jumbo trades. Separately, Italy has BTP auctions scheduled 28 and 30 July (10yr, 5yr, short paper, a linker and a floater, totalling roughly €14–16bn) — sovereign, not syndicated primary. Given the fresh oil shock and equity sell-off overnight, issuers weighing new mandates today are likely to pause and reassess volatility before launching.

KEY SPREADS

INDEX	LEVEL (BP)	MOVE / DIRECTION
iTraxx Europe Main 5Y	n/a	No reliably dated July 2026 level found
iTraxx Europe Crossover 5Y	n/a (last dated anchor: 246bp, 9 Jul)	Stale — current level not confirmed
CDX North America IG 5Y	n/a	—
Avg EUR corporate IG spread (OAS)	n/a	—

Real-time iTraxx/CDX levels sit behind Bloomberg/Refinitiv/ICE terminal feeds; open-web aggregators returned inconsistently dated snapshots that could not be reliably pinned to 29–30 July 2026 and are excluded rather than guessed.

COMMENTARY

2026 reverse-Yankee volumes (USD issuers printing in EUR/GBP) have topped €115bn year-to-date — Amazon, Alphabet, Goldman Sachs and now AT&T have all been active, a trend dominated so far by TMT/tech-and-AI-infrastructure-linked names rather than industrials, transport or energy specifically. Euro-area yields had eased into 28-29 July on hopes of Iran de-escalation, a supportive backdrop for funding costs, but that has now reversed with the fresh overnight escalation and Bund yields at 15-year highs — a headwind for issuance economics into today. H1 2026 EUR benchmark covered bond issuance reached €121.7bn, up 21.2% year-on-year, pointing to still-solid FIG-adjacent investor appetite over the year as a whole. Net read: the primary window was cautiously open into Wednesday but is likely to see issuers pause today pending clarity on the Iran shock and the BoE decision.

10. ECONOMIC CALENDAR — TODAY (30 JULY 2026)

TIME (LONDON)	REGION	INDICATOR	CONSENSUS	IMPORTANCE
06:00	UK	Nationwide House Prices (July)	n/a — prior print showed 2026's first monthly fall, −0.6% MoM	MEDIUM
09:00	Eurozone	Q2 2026 GDP flash estimate	n/a	HIGH
12:00	UK	Bank of England MPC decision + Monetary Policy Report ("Super Thursday")	Consensus: hold at 3.75% (held 7-2 in June); live two-way risk given services inflation at 3.7% and the oil shock	HIGH
13:30	US	Q2 2026 GDP, advance estimate	GDPNow nowcast ~1.5% (28 Jul) — not a formal consensus figure	HIGH
13:30	US	Personal Income & Spending (June) / Core PCE (June)	n/a — recent YoY core PCE run-rate cited near 3.4%	HIGH
13:30	US	Initial jobless claims	n/a	MEDIUM

The BoE decision at noon is the dominant domestic event of the day, immediately relevant to the London pre-open, with a hold expected but the MPC split enough (two dissents in June) that a hawkish surprise cannot be ruled out. The US data block (GDP, core PCE, claims) at 13:30 BST will shape whether markets extend Wednesday's hawkish Fed repricing or partially reverse it. Note the Bank of Japan meets Friday 31 July and the Eurozone flash July CPI follows the same day — both are set-up risk for tomorrow rather than today.

11. CORPORATE EVENTS & EARNINGS

COMPANY	MARKET	EVENT	TIME
Shell plc	LSE	Q2 2026 results, before London open — adj. earnings reported ~$9bn (beat vs ~$8.5bn Q2-25), revenue ~$70bn; stronger LNG/trading offset a Qatar-related output cut	Pre-open London
ING Groep	Euronext Amsterdam	Q2 2026 results; consensus ~€6.10bn revenue (+6.97% YoY)	Pre-open
Valero Energy	NYSE	Q2 2026 results — read-through for European refining margins	Before US open
Mastercard	NYSE	Q2 2026 results; consensus ~$4.76 EPS on ~$9.07bn revenue	Before US open
Apple	Nasdaq	Fiscal Q3 results after the close; consensus EPS ~$1.86 — focus on iPhone demand, services, AI capex	~22:00 BST
Amazon	Nasdaq	Q2 2026 results after the close; consensus EPS ~$1.85 — focus on AWS growth, retail margins, AI infrastructure spend	After US close

Apple and Amazon close out this week's "Magnificent Seven" reporting cluster after Microsoft's beat and Meta's miss on Wednesday. Their reaction is likely to be the dominant driver of Friday's European open rather than today's session. Shell is the key large-cap European reporter this morning.

12. STOCKS TO WATCH

Shell (SHEL) — LSE	Q2 results before the open: adj. earnings ~$9bn beat estimates, revenue ~$70bn, stronger LNG/trading offset a Qatar-related output cut tied to Middle East disruption.	Mixed / volatile
American Airlines (AAL) — Nasdaq	Cut FY26 guidance on fuel costs; JPMorgan raised PT to $24 (Overweight), Citi trimmed to $19 but kept Buy. Aviation sector exposed to the oil spike.	Mixed, high volatility
Maersk / Frontline / Scorpio Tankers / ZIM — Shipping	Strait of Hormuz effectively closed (~10 ships/day vs ~88 normal); Maersk added a further $1,000/container Hormuz surcharge on top of $1,800–3,800/container emergency Gulf rates; war-risk tanker insurance premiums at 3–10% of hull value.	Bullish
Standard Chartered / BNP Paribas / UBS / Deutsche Bank — Banks	European bank earnings season beating broadly: StanChart H1 pretax profit +9% plus a new $1bn buyback; BNP Paribas net profit +33% YoY; UBS profit +45% with a new $3bn buyback; Deutsche Bank fixed-income trading beat.	Bullish
Barrick / Newmont / Agnico Eagle / Fresnillo — Gold miners	Gold back above $4,050–4,100/oz on renewed Middle East safe-haven demand and the hawkish Fed hold supporting real-yield-sensitive flows.	Bullish
Implats / Lundin Mining — Metals & Mining	Implats suspended production at Rustenburg after safety incidents (27 Jul); Lundin flagged storm damage at its Chilean Caserones/Candelaria operations. Idiosyncratic supply disruptions.	Bearish
Rolls-Royce — LSE, Aerospace & Defense	Post-Farnborough order momentum: Trent XWB-97 deal with Philippine Airlines, Trent 1000 XE with Somon Air, Trent 7000 with Aerolíneas Argentinas, plus a GCAP fighter-engine development milestone this week.	Bullish
TotalEnergies — CAC, Energy	Brent near $90 boosts near-term FCF (Q2 net income already $5.4bn, +100% YoY); asymmetric risk if the Iran conflict de-escalates suddenly.	Bullish near-term
British American Tobacco — LSE	Cutting 9,000 roles (~20% of workforce) in an AI-led restructuring targeting £600m of savings by 2028; stock has drifted lower since the announcement.	Bearish
ASML / SAP — European AI-capex exposure	Meta's after-hours miss and the Korean tech-stock crash reinforce AI-infrastructure-spending doubts; European AI-capex-linked names are exposed to negative sentiment spillover at the open.	Bearish

13. MACRO / CORPORATE / POLITICAL HIGHLIGHTS

MACRO

Fed hold with hawkish 3-way dissent (29 Jul): Rate held at 3.50–3.75%, first three-way hawkish dissent since 2016. Markets read the Fed as behind the curve; long-end yields jumped (30Y at highest since 2007).

BoE "Super Thursday" (30 Jul, 12:00 BST): Consensus hold at 3.75%, but a split MPC and the oil-driven inflation shock keep a hawkish surprise live.

ECB already hawkish: Held its deposit rate at 2.25% on 23 July after a June hike; officials increasingly flag a September hike given Bund yields at 15-year highs and energy-driven inflation (euro-area June CPI 2.8%, flash July print due tomorrow).

US data due today: Q2 GDP advance estimate, core PCE and jobless claims at 13:30 BST will test whether Wednesday's hawkish repricing extends or partially reverses.

CORPORATE

European bank earnings season beating broadly: BNP Paribas, UBS, Deutsche Bank and Standard Chartered all posted strong results; Goldman Sachs forecasts +11% YoY European bank profit growth this quarter.

M&A active: OCS Group's $4.17bn purchase of Mitie; Iberdrola's $2.3bn move for control of Finnish utility Caruna; Var Energi's $1.3bn purchase of BlueNord, creating Europe's largest independent oil & gas firm.

Big Tech cluster: Microsoft beat, Meta missed (29 Jul); Apple and Amazon report today. TotalEnergies posted Q2 net income of $5.4bn (+100% YoY); Arm's revenue beat 22% but shares fell 7% on guidance concerns.

POLITICAL / GEOPOLITICAL

Iran war / Strait of Hormuz, day 151: The strait remains effectively closed to commercial shipping; a fragile 10-day ceasefire proposal is reportedly on the table alongside continued tanker-attack reports and a Houthi blockade threat against Saudi oil flows via Bab-al-Mandeb.

US-EU trade tension escalating: Trump has threatened fresh Section 301 tariffs on the EU after its $1bn (€890m) Digital Markets Act fine on Alphabet/Google, plus a threatened 100% tariff on countries imposing digital services taxes. The prior global 10% Section 122 tariff expired 24 July, but a 15% US tariff on most EU goods remains in place.

14. KEY THEMES — TOP 5 BY HORIZON

TODAY'S TOP 5

1. BoE decision, 12:00 BST

A split MPC means real two-way volatility risk in GBP, gilts and UK banks even if the headline is a hold.

2. US GDP, core PCE, jobless claims

Will confirm or challenge the Fed's Wednesday hold; a hot PCE print could reprice the whole rate path further hawkish.

3. Apple & Amazon earnings (after US close)

Closes out the Magnificent Seven reporting cluster; AI-capex commentary from Microsoft/ Meta already set a cautious tone.

4. Shell Q2 results

Large-cap FTSE bellwether; market weighing stronger LNG/trading against a Qatar-related output cut.

5. Strait of Hormuz headlines

Any escalation or de-escalation signal on the 10-day ceasefire proposal moves oil, shipping and defense names intraday.

THIS WEEK'S TOP 5

1. Big Tech earnings cluster

Microsoft/Meta (29 Jul), Apple/Amazon (30 Jul) set the tone for AI-capex sentiment into August.

2. European bank earnings climax

UBS, Deutsche Bank, Standard Chartered and BNP Paribas all reported, confirming a multi-year sector profitability upswing.

3. Fed's rare 3-way hawkish dissent

Markets reassessing the pace and direction of the Fed's next move after the most partisan vote since 2016.

4. Eurozone flash July CPI (31 Jul)

Key input for the ECB's September decision after June's inflation-driven hawkish signalling.

5. Farnborough Airshow aftermath

Boeing edged Airbus on firm orders (186 vs 157) but Airbus leads YTD deliveries (373 vs 328); Rolls-Royce landed multiple new engine deals.

THIS MONTH'S TOP 5

1. Earnings season tail

Over 90% of STOXX 600 market cap due to have reported by end-August.

2. Iran war / Hormuz trajectory

The single biggest swing factor for oil, shipping and inflation; ceasefire progress or collapse could move Brent by double digits.

3. EU-US trade escalation

Section 301 tariff threat over the Google DMA fine and digital-tax retaliation risk could hit EU-US trade flows and tech/consumer names.

4. ECB and Fed September meetings

Both central banks face a harder call after this month's hawkish signals.

5. Mining sector consolidation

Watch for renewed M&A speculation after the failed Rio Tinto-Glencore talks and the completed Anglo Teck merger.

15. KEY TRENDS TO WATCH

1 DAY

BoE decision, 12:00 BST: Live two-way risk in GBP and gilts despite a hold consensus.

US GDP / core PCE / claims, 13:30 BST: Tests whether Wednesday's hawkish Fed repricing extends.

Shell / Valero earnings: Sets the energy-sector tone alongside the oil spike.

Apple / Amazon after the close: Volatility driver into Friday's European open.

1 WEEK

Eurozone flash July CPI/GDP (31 Jul): Sets ECB September expectations.

Continued Q2 earnings flow: More European banks and industrials to report.

Fed dissent repricing: Markets working through rate-cut-odds implications of the 3-way hawkish vote.

Iran ceasefire progress or breakdown: Dominant swing factor for oil and risk sentiment this week.

1 MONTH

Iran war / Hormuz resolution trajectory: The dominant tail risk for oil, freight rates and inflation.

EU-US tariff escalation risk: Section 301 threat over the Google DMA fine and digital-tax retaliation.

ECB and Fed September meetings: Both face a harder call after this month's hawkish signals.

Earnings season completion: Over 90% of STOXX 600 market cap due to have reported by end-August.
